Altho' Brighton Area History begins generally around 1830 and Michigan became a state in 1837, the actual history of the white man's appearance in the area began over 200 years earlier. By 1608 the general area we know as Canada was occupied and governed by the French. The Governor, Samuel de Champlain, sent Etienne Brule' and a companion Greenbke, west with instructions to find a water route to the Pacific. Paddling their canoes it is believed they reached Lake Superior about 1622. Jean Nicolet, also sent by Governor Champlain, traversed the Straits and explored into Lake Michigan within the next several years.

These venturesome explorers, treated and supported as guests by the Indians, were soon followed by trappers and traders who brought rich cargoes of furs to Quebec, the center of French rule in North America. Missionaries accompanied the early trading expeditions which resulted in Jesuit Father Jacques Marquette establishing, at Sault Ste. Marie, the first mission in 1668. (Which means the 'Soo' has a history of over 300 years.) Just three years later, St. Ignace became the site of his second mission.

These two northern missions became the major sites at which the Indian and the white man, the French, had contact. Michigan history was shaped and bound to the French for almost a century and the life of the Indian was never the same again.

The British, traditional enemies of France in Europe, claimed all the land along the Atlantic from Maine to the Carolinas. Always vying for more lands and influence these two enemies tried to extend their territories in the New World. The French by being generous with gifts to the Indians were able to count on them as allies and therefore were able to keep English influence and control out of this vast inland empire until the mid 18th century.

The reliance of the Indians' way of life on the French technology forced them to depend on the mission-trapped furs for the French, became enslaved to alcohol, and fought successfully with the French in the battles against the British. In June, 1671, the French king claimed the Great Lakes and all lands "bounded on the one side by the Northern and Western seas and on the other side by the South Sea including all its length and breadth." Within the next 11 years, French explorers had descended by the Mississippi all the way to the Gulf of Mexico.

To demonstrate more than a ceremonial possession of the land, forts were established at the southern ends of Lakes Michigan and Huron during the 1680s and 1690s. These military outposts were abandoned in 1696 because the French king feared a falling fur market and the Jesuit missionaries successfully argued against the alcohol to which the Indians had access. EDITORIAL

"It's just an old house and will probably cost more to restore than it's worth." How often owners of old structures are tempted to take the easy way out and eliminate another acknowledgment that others existed before us. Preservationists and others are duly concerned about the future of older buildings in the area which represent an architecture and history of our beginnings.

How to determine the importance of an old building? Try to consider the understanding of ourselves and the area's history if these buildings no longer exist. (Editor: M. Bair)

1986 MEMBERSHIPS

The following have paid 1986 dues since the last issue: Marshall & Ellen Jean Cooper, John & Charlene Danselberger, Michael & Jennifer Hill, Kathryn Hodgkin, Janet Rorabacher, Margaret Siford. (1987 memberships have been received for: Clayton Epley, Karen Goss and Carol Coudic).

Trail Tales should be sent to people who care about the history of the Brighton Area. Send name and address to the Editor so they can be included in the mailing list.

ORAL HISTORY PROJECT

Through the cooperation of the Society, the Brighton Public Library, and the Senior Citizens' Center and the Alternative Education program, video taped interviews are planned of six long time residents of the area. Lisa McBride, Ann Edmundson and Veronica Blackman will be conducting the interviews and Eric Barkham will be handling the video camera.

More interviewers could be used and names of people to be interviewed are needed. Not every interview has to be video taped, although that would be the ideal from posterity's point of view. Contact the Secretary or Editor with your suggestions and offer of help.

November 1, 9a.m.-c1p.m., a workshop in Pontiac at the Michigan Oral History Council will focus on definitions and techniques of oral history. Register by October 15. $12.00. Contact the Editor for more info.

WHERE IS THE JAMES H. SMITH HOME? The Society has received a picture "The James H. Smith home near Brighton, Michigan, taken about 1877" from Elizabeth Smith Bindenagel of South Dakota (a descendant of Lyons). It will be displayed at the Annual meeting November 11, hopefully to be identified as to its location and whether it exists today. It may be in Green Oak Township since J. H. Smith is located there in the 1880 History of Livingston County in the area of Malby and Rickett Road. Contact the Editor if you can be of help or wish to see the picture before the Annual meeting.

Lions School

Through the cooperation of the Society's Lyons School Restoration Committee and the Building Trades teacher and class of the Brighton Area Schools, progress is being made in the planned restoration of the Lions School, 114-55 Burley Rd. At the recent school board meeting the Society presented a check for $4000.00 to the school district.

This one room school, built in 1885, will be restored, as nearly as possible, to its original design. Local school children will be able to spend classroom time in an atmosphere of early Michigan education learning also to appreciate in which their ancestors participated in a learning process organized long before Michigan acquired statehood.

A brief perusal of the Treasurer's report convinces one that more funds must quickly be raised. Income tax deductible donations may be made to the Society noting the Lyons School Restoration Fund.
