The Warner Farm on Buno Road is the topic of research this issue.

Timothy W. Warner, at 19 years of age, was among the very early settlers in Brighton Township, arriving in 1837 with his parents and brother H. H. His father, Duncan, a native of Rhode Island, and the rest of the family returned to Livingston County, New York, not long after. Timothy stayed to confront the unbroken wilderness of Brighton Township.

The January, 1899, obituary of William T. Turner states "...the oldest man in the township died on the 12th at the home of Eugene Hicks, aged 94. He came to this community when it was all wilderness in company with Timothy Warner, Abiram Dean, Cyrus Morgan and E. G. Durfee."

By farming land on shares Warner was able to purchase 60 acres in Section 27 E 1/4 NE, in an 'entirely unsown' state, building a log cabin on the site in 1841.

Participating in the organization and naming of the township he also served as township treasurer 1863-65.

In 1857 he married Lucretia Jones, also from New York. [They may have been acquainted in that state.] In 1869 a two story frame house in the popular Greek Revival style was built next to the cabin. This house soon sheltered six children, four having been born in the cabin. These children, and those that followed, attended the nearby one room Lyons Schoolhouse. The home still lodges descendants of the Timothy Warner Family.

By the time the frame house was built barns had also been erected as was a blacksmith shop with attached corn crib. As some barns and out buildings were needed son George, and grandson Herbert, constructed them.

Through the years Timothy and Lucretia acquired 600 acres at one point. Cattle, horses, pigs, chickens, etc., must be fed and housed. Hay, grains, pastures and orchards require many acres. A January, 1890, clipping listing township taxpayers who paid over $50.00, included Timothy paying $50.61. A part ownership, with Thomas Waddy, 1857, of the Woodhull Mill on Pleasant Valley Road (built 1833), was one of his many real estate ventures. Preserve, Advance and Dissiminate Knowledge of the History of the Brighton Area

Brighton High School Graduation, June 9, 2002

Another time of commencement is upon us. The number of students involved has grown from "...two young ladies..." in 1866, to over 500 in 2002 with no sign of declining.

The many settlers who arrived in the Brighton area in the 1830s were mainly concerned with providing shelter, clothing, safety and food for the family. This entailed clearing the land, building a log cabin and raising a crop. However, these sturdy pioneers realized their children, besides the basics for survival, also needed an education. Opportunities for education had been left behind in the east.

Not only in the village was a school organized, but in the townships surrounding rural one room school districts were formed. The teachers in all these very early schools taught eight grades.

By 1866 a high school had been built in the village on Rickett Road. Ten grades were offered. In 1883 the 11th and 12th grades were added. In 1888 the first commencement took place.

Rural school eighth grade graduates, their parents paying tuition, could attend high school in the village. They rode a horse or drove a buggy to town. Some stayed with relatives during the week.

By 1928 the number of students from surrounding rural schools made necessary the construction of a larger school on Church Street.

By then the rural districts were paying the tuition costs.

Following WW II, the construction of major highways resulted in a population explosion in the townships. This was also the case at the high school. Brighton City residents, understandably, complained about the overcrowding their students experienced. They objected to accepting students from the rural districts which were not taxed at the same rate. In 1950 consolidation of the rural districts with the Brighton city district began taking place.
