BRIGHTON'S SKI JUMPS

One of this country's earliest ski jumping meets was held at Ishpeming, MI in 1892; the origin of the National Ski Association, 1904. A Norwegian immigrant, Mikkil Hall was living in Ishpeming when the first of six sons was born; Henry, February 27, 1893. At a very early age, on home-made barrel skates, he and all his brothers were inspired with a love of the sport. Henry won jumping records in 1913, World Amateur Championship, Duluth, MN; 1914 National American Championship and 1916 National Professional Championship both in Glenwood, MN. At age of 23 his jumping brought him the world's record, 203' at Steamboat Springs, CO, March 7, 1917. While taking time out for Army duty in WW I, his National Professional crown was won by his best friend Anders Haugen in 1919 and 1920. In 1921 Henry regained the title.

He and brothers, Carl, Clarence, Arthur, George and Magnus began research for the highest elevation to be located in Michigan area. In the Fall of 1921 they built a 3x4 of 2x8 lumber in Northville at Seven Mile and Edward Hines Dr. Ski Jumping was promoted by building slides and holding contests drawing 1,000s of spectators. The Hall brothers organized the Detroit Ski Club.

In 1929, following a search for a satisfactory site in Brighton, the high sand hill one mile NE of Brighton on Trunk Line M-43 (Flinn Road) was purchased. In 1935, the Michigan State Ski Club was organized and the building of the Brighton slide began in earnest. A 100' steel tower, the tallest in the country, was erected. The hill was 350' long with a 100' drop. A 50' wood slide and a toboggan slide with a 300 yard runway were planned. Contest was scheduled for February, 1936. The first trial was thwarted by a snow truck's breakdown; the next week gale like winds made it impossible. The last weekend was the third attempt to ride the 130' slide. Rochester, Pontiac and Detroit sent skiers. Hall's last jump was late in the day; snow conditions had changed. He fell at the end of the slide. One skier tip lodged in the snow, "...twisting him, snapping his hip at the socket and throwing him forward on his head. One ski...struck him in the chest." At Mellius Hospital in Ann Arbor physicians predicted he'd be in a wheel chair for months. He was later moved to Henry Ford Hospital. Injuries had been incurred in the past but this one ended his competitive career. Four months after a major fall at age 79 Henry recovered to continue skiing and teaching. 1932 was the last time on skis; Henry was honored at the Steamboat Springs Winter Festival skiing the landing slope.

Both Henry, d. April 17, 1936, and wife Olga E., d. November 13, 1935, are buried in Loveland Burial Park, Loveland, CO.

The Depression had a firm grip on the country. The construction of the jumps brought employment to local residence. In 1937, the Brighton slide was sold to the Detroit Winter sports Club to be dismantled and set up at the Rochester side; at the end of John R. Road. A number of local teams met Henry Hall and tried out their skiing skills on the jumps with wood slats with a strap for a work shoe and a small snow fastened around the heel. Among the teams were Harold Jarvis (dec.) and Gerry Burgess. Horace Taylor has memories - to properly fit the landing slope snow was gathered and trucked by his Father Clarence. These rolling hills and deep valleys are now the location of Old Dominion development.
