BRIGHTON'S FIRST DEVELOPERS

"Brighton, although not the oldest, is by no means the least considerable of the townships of the County of Livingston. Like many other townships, it had, at first, no separate organization, but comprised an important part of the Township of Green Oak, and it was not until April, 1838, that it was accorded a distinct existence." Recorded in F.E. Ellis' 'History of Livingston County, Michigan'. Eventually, 1867, from the township would be formed the village of Brighton.

As settlers moved into Michigan, the majority came via the Erie Canal, over Lake Erie, arriving in Detroit. After finding a room to rent for the family, the male members headed west along the Sauk Trail to Ann Arbor and points west, or the Grand River Trail. The trip from Detroit into the interior usually took 2-3 days. Trail markers blazed on trees helped define the way through the wilderness thick with hardwood trees, interspersed with streams, rivers and marshes.

Among those choosing the Grand River Trail were William Noble and son, William, Jr. from Connecticut c. 1835. One also could add Anthony Gale, also from Connecticut, William Dutcher and William McCauley, both from New York on the trail to Brighton. Alba the Malby brothers were credited with being the first arrivals in August, 1832, those that followed were convinced of the money to be made in reselling land for development. That development was sure to follow the construction of the Malby's saw mill on Ore Creek.

Horace H. Comstock was already in Kalamazoo County by 1835, living in a town with his name. By March 25, 1833, he owned property in Brighton Township, Section 30; the east 3/4 of the southwest 1/4. Whether he ever saw the land, this writer cannot determine.

February 20, 1837, Comstock sold his property in Section 30 to William Noble, Jr., at a time when Brighton Township was still part of Green Oak. By July 5, the Noble plat is placed - north of Main, east and south of Ore Creek, west of East Street. This was known as: 'lower town'. Brothers Almon and Maynard Malby were the first to buy in Noble's Plat and built the first frame house in the settlement (southeast corner Grand River and Mill St. Paul Street).

Anthony Gale had purchased land in 'upper town'. This was located in Section 31, the east half of the northwest 1/4, the northeast 1/4 of the southeast 1/4 and the west 1/4 of the northeast 1/4. This he sold by 1840, retaining Gale's Addition, the area around the intersection of Grand River and Rickott Road.

Dutcher's Plat was in the area of Grand River, Spencer and Church Streets. Gale also sold to Harvey T. Lee, which then became J.B. Lee's Addition east along Spencer and McCauley's Addition was east along Grand River. McCauley was a merchant with a store on the southwest corner of Grand River and North later a furniture store.

"Mr. Noble, Jr., ... came from New England and brought with him many Puritanical ideas. He was very scrupulous in his religious duties, and held the use of liquor an abomination, which, in those tippings days, was sufficient to confirm his reputation for eccentricity." "Anthony Gale is described ... as a man of irreducible temper, quick to resent a real or fancied wrong, but withal, a kind-hearted, and keen and active man of business." (Quotes are from Ellis' 1880 History.)

An early purchaser in the Dutcher Plat was Robert D. Power, who put up a log public house-tavern in 1836, on the northeast corner of Grand River and Noble (Spencer). Ellis describes him as a man of "much force and intuitive shrewdness, and being somewhat inclined to politics, exerted a considerable influence in that direction among the early settlers of the neighborhood." Shortly after the formations of Brighton Township, an organizational meeting was held at the home of Daniel Lane in Section 17. Various officers were selected with William Noble, Jr. as Clerk. William Piess notes there was no treasurer selected, as there was no money anyway.

SOCIETY PROJECTS

ARCHIVES: a number of calls requesting family hisatory information have been processed. Can someone tell us about the c. 1927 Rural Property inventory (was basis for property determination), a WPA-funded project for jobless, i.e. CCC, Post Office artists, etc.? These were major Federal projects during the Depression about which we know too little.

HISTORIC RESOURCE SURVEY: Histories of local businesses, government, etc., sites are continually being filed in a retrievable manner. This collection continues to be refined by Sue Garcia.

CEMETARY HISTORIC SITE APPLICATIONS: Bird, Kensington and Pleasant Valley, in Brighton Township, are being prepared. It's appropriate these cemeteries should be included on the Michigan register. The township board is providing needed care for these sites in which many very early settlers are interred.

CLUSTER MEETING AT HAMBURG

Hosted by the Hamburg Historical Society, members of the Brighton Area, Milford, Northfield and South Lyon Societies, October 16, toured the fine historical museum. Discussion concerned a means of publicizing the various societies' sites.

Green Oak Township Historical Society will host the May 21, 2009, meeting at the 1856 Green Oak Township Hall.

SOCIETY'S ANNUAL MEETING

November 9, 2008, 1-4 p.m.
Lyon School; 11455 Bono Road

POT LUCK AND ELECTIONS

Dinner will begin at 1 p.m., General Meeting at 1:45. Bring a dish to pass. Table service, beverage and dessert will be provided. Some of the same delicious dishes served last year are planned.

For fun, a 'grab bag' of estate sales items will be offered. You may also bring your own. DON'T MISS THIS!!!!

TRICK OR TREAT AT LYON SCHOOL

The October Open House was fun for a lot of kids, and adults too. Mindy Kinsey brought an extensive hat collection, which everyone tried on, fanciful pumpkins were painted and cookies and cider devouried. And everyone toured the Lyon School.

To pull the wool over his eyes

Today it is taken to mean that one has been deceived or hoodwinked. The expression began at a time when gentlemen wore powered wigs. At that time "wool" was a joking term for hair. The expression came from jokingly tilting a man's wig over his eyes so that he couldn't see what was going on.

To make faces

This was not a fun activity in which children would engage. To those living in the 18th century through the early 19th century – it meant creating babies!

BRIGHTON'S FIRST DEVELOPERS

"Brighton, although not the oldest, is by no means the least considerable of the townships of the County of Livingston. Like many other townships it had, at first, no separate organization, but comprised an important part of the Township of Green Oak, and it was not until April, 1838, that it was accorded a distinct existence." Recorded in J.E. Ellis' 'History of Livingston County, Michigan'. Eventually, 1807, from the township would be formed the village of Brighton.

As settlers moved into Michigan, the majority came via the Erie Canal, over Lake Erie, arriving in Detroit. After finding a room to rent for the family, the male members headed west along the Saug Trail to Ann Arbor and points west, or the Grand River Trail. The trip from Detroit into the interior usually took 2-3 days. Trail markers blazed on trees helped define the way through the wilderness thick with hardwood trees, interspersed with streams, rivers and marshes.

Among those choosing the Grand River Trail were William Noble and son, William, Jr. from Connecticut c. 1835. One also could add Anthony Gale, also from Connecticut, William Dutcher and William McCauley, both from New York on the trail to Brighton.

Albeit the Malby brothers are credited with being the first arrivals in August, 1832, those that followed were complicit of the money to be made in reselling land for development. That development was sure to follow the construction of the Malby's saw mill on Ore Creek.

Horace H. Comstock was already in Kalamazoo County by 1835, living in a town with his name. By March 25, 1833, he owned property in Brighton Township, Section 30; the east ½ of the southwest ¼. Whether he ever saw the land, this writer cannot determine.

February 20, 1837, Comstock sold his property in Section 30 to William Noble, Jr., at a time when Brighton Township was still part of Green Oak. By July 5, the Noble plat is recorded – north of Main, east and south of Ore Creek, west of East Street. This was known as; "lower town". Brothers Almon and Maynard Malby were the first to buy in Noble's Plat and built the first frame house in the settlement (southeast corner Grand River and Mill (St. Paul Street).

Anthony Gale had purchased land in 'upper town'. This was located in Section 31, the east half of the northwest ¼, the northeast ½ of the northeast ¼ and the west ½ of the northeast ¼. He sold by 1840, retaining Gale's Addition, the area around the intersection of Grand River and Rickett Road.

Dutcher's Plat was in the area of Grand River, Spencer and Church Streets. Gale also sold to Harvey T. Lee, which then became J.B. Lee's Addition east along Spencer and McCauley's Addition east along Grand River. McCauley was a merchant with a store on the southwest corner of Grand River and North later a furniture store.

"Wm. Noble, Jr.,..... came from New England and brought with him many Puritanical ideas. He was very scrupulous in his duties, and held the use of liquor an abomination, which, in those tippings days, was sufficient to confirm his reputation for eccentricity." Anthony Gale is described as "a man of irascible temper, quick to resent a real or fancied wrong, but withal, a kind-hearted, and keen and active man of business." (Quotes are from Ellis' 1880 History.)

An early purchaser in the Dutcher Plat was Robert D. Power, who put up a log public house-tavern in 1836, on the northeast corner of Grand River and Noble (Spencer). Ellis describes him as a man of "much force and intuutive shrewdness, and being somewhat inclined to politics, exerted a considerable influence in that direction among the early settlers of the neighborhood." Shortly after the formation of Brighton Township, an organizational meeting was held at the home of Daniel Lane in Section 17. Various officers were selected with William Noble, Jr. as Clerk. William Piess notes there was no treasurer selected, as there was no money anyway.
