GERMAN SETTLERS MAKE GENOA TOWNSHIP THEIR HOME

Richard Behrens, Sr., was born in Hanover, Germany, July 3, 1812. Following in the footsteps of many before him, he immigrated to Canada in 1838 and to Genoa Township in 1844. Whether by design or not, many of Germany birth, i.e. Conrad, Dorr, Hartman, Westphal, arrived in Genoa about the same time. They were not alone in their struggles to make a home.

Within a few years, 1846, Richard married Magdelena Conrad, daughter of neighbor Charles, Sr. and Maria. By 1859, Behrens owned over 320 acres in Sections 14, 23 and 24 of Genoa Township. Much of Conrad's land was located around Crooked Lake in Sections 22 and 27. The Behrens and their neighbors shared, besides their industry, the experience of crossing the ocean in a sailing vessel. They, individually and collectively, cleared land, lived in log homes, built frame barns and finally had sufficient means, c. 1870 to build fine, large homes. Basements were dug, the plots graded, stone, gravel and timber hauled to the several sites. Five of these homes were built of brick, some from their own clay and baked on the spot. Experenced workmen were boarded during the construction.

Richard and Magdelena had ten children: Henry 1846, Mary 1848, Theresa 1850, Philip 1853, Charles 1855, Caroline 1857, Albert 1858, Amelia 1860, Richard, Jr. 1863 and Leonard 1867. These children and their neighbors attended Ratz School on Grand River and Kellogg Roads. Charles and Henry succumbed to the lure of the Wild West and the silver and gold to be mined in Colorado. Charles married; a 1910 clipping sent thanks for condolences from a daughter, Mrs. J. D. Wilson of Kansas. Whether Henry married has not been determined nor where he is buried. All of their brothers remained single. Albert also spent some time in Colorado, but came back to Genoa to live with his sister, Caroline, in the old homestead. Caroline remained single, courted for her mother and kept house for brothers Phillip, Richard, Leonard and Albert in the big brick house.

Of the Behrens other daughters: Mary married neighbor George Bit. Ratz and had three children, Clara, Mayne and George W.; Theresa married Henry Herbst, becoming parents of Richard, John, Charles, Fred, Louis, Albert and Anna; Amelia married Albert Bauer, but they were childless. However, the Ratz and Herbst families assured there were enough cousins, many still in the area, to go around.

Bill Pless' father, George, often told his son of the many fun times at the brick house. A fire-incident – a springboard was mounted on the barn floor at the back of the basement barn. Running on the barn floor to the end of the board, one sprang up then head-over-heals into the remains of an old straw stack below. The girls were as good as the boys even though hampered by having to hold onto long skirts. Fields and woodlots were roasted, muskrats trapped and squirrels and ducks hunted. It was always fun to go to Crooked Lake for swimming. Phillip Pless taught many boys to swim and dive when they were very young. Magdelena usually had a peppermint in the pocket of her black dress or a small toy to give a visiting child and always a smile. These small items she accepted for unpaid rent on a store she owned in town, The Racket Store, 428 W. Main.

A great, great, granddaughter and family now call the house Richard and Magdelena built home. That house was built to last. Her father, Merrill Herbst, lives in a single story home he built in 1975, just west. Richard, Sr. and Magdelena sleep with most of their children and several grand children in the St. George Lutheran Cemetery situated in a small corner of their original property.

(Compiled by Marianna Bair from writings of Bill Pless; census records; Ellis' 1880 History of Livingston County; St. George Cemetery records and an interview with Merrill Herbst. Additions, corrections requested. 810/229-6402.)

Listed below are more expressions that were in use in the 19th century and are still commonly used. In some cases, the meanings have changed entirely since their inception – in others, they have withstood the test of time. (Reprinted from The Essay Spring 2001)

To make ends meet
To a 19th century American, this would not mean that one is able to pay the bills – it would have meant to have sexual relations!

On the go
The use of this expression to mean that one is on the move or busy didn’t come about until 1840. Prior to that time, it meant that someone was on the verge of ruin or destruction.

Half and half
If a milk product comes to mind, think again. In the early 17th century half and half meant either a drink of ale and beer or ale and porter.

BRIGHTON’S MAIN STREET PROGRAM—KEEPING THE DREAM ALIVE

Brighton is a great family town!

Have you ever attended the Millpond concert on Sunday evening during the summer? If you have not done this, you are missing a fine experience of our inviting, quaint downtown. One will see the faces of our community as toes tap to the music from the gazebo. Children dance to the tunes as the adults remember their younger days. One can experience similar smiles, laughs and sheer facial exuberance if you pass by Imagination Station, and watch the children dash about the awesome playground adjacent to the Millpond.

Have you ever walked along the side of the Millpond from downtown to Grand River Avenue? This is a delightful walk as you feel the breeze off the water and hear the whispering of the leaves as they swirl and turn. You might pause and reflect as you walk past the cemetery. Children love to look over the protective railing and watch the fish as they move among the lily pads below the wooden deck of the walkway. The inviting aromas of nearby restaurants attract our senses to dine.

More improvements are in progress and the dream of a more vibrant downtown grows!

Have you heard about Brighton’s new Main Street Program? This national program that has evolved from historic preservation, seeks to utilize the downtown assets to draw the public into the business area. Community developers have access to proven resources within this program. One component is to improve the visual image. Another is to expand businesses through recruitment and promotion. The visual image involves the physical appearance of building facades and downtown landmarks. The Society is very excited because this includes maintaining and improving the faces of cherished landmarks already present. Historic preservation and its prominence in a vibrant downtown is center stage.

The Society hopes the Old Village Cemetery will be a high priority.

Thank you to the City of Brighton for keeping the dream alive!

Jim Vichich
